A chance discovery

In 1940, some amazing ancient art 1 was discovered (discover) in a cave in France. It 2 was found (find) by four teenagers, who were exploring the area and noticed the cave by chance. When they went in, they were amazed at what they saw. The cave at Lascaux is unusual because the walls 3 were covered (cover) with around 600 pictures of animals and other designs, and all the paintings 4 were created (create) over 17,000 years ago! The caves 5 were opened

(open) to the public in 1948, but unfortunately, the site 6 was closed (close) again a few years later, because the light was damaging the paintings. Now the original paintings 7 are kept (keep) in the dark, but a copy of the cave 8 was built (build) in 1983, so visitors can continue to experience what it is like to be inside. So now this amazing art from the past 9 is seen (see) by thousands of visitors every year.

2 Circle the correct active or passive form of the verbs to complete the stories.

Sometimes, valuable pieces of art 1 find/are found by chance. Here are two examples. In 2007, a student in Berlin 2 bought/was bought an old sofa from a market. When she got home, she 3 discovered/was discovered a valuable old painting 4 hid/was hidden inside it. She 5 sold/was sold the painting for more than $27,000! In the 1990s, Teri Horton 6 saw/was seen a painting in a second-hand shop. She thought it was ugly, but she thought her friend might like it, so she 7 decided/was decided to buy it for her. She paid $5 for it. Her friend thought it was ugly too, so Horton tried to sell it again for a few dollars. But the painting 8 saw/was seen by an art teacher, who recognized the style of the artist Jackson Pollock. Experts haven't decided if the painting is a real Jackson Pollock, but if it 9 painted/was painted by the artist, it could be worth millions of dollars!
