Life change

Ever since this pandemic started, many things in life have changed. When the lock down started we all imagined it was going to be a matter of two or three weeks, but its third anniversary is around the corner. Since then, I have been doing lots of things differently. First of all, I've played lots of videogames, although it had seemed fun I got bored of it soon. Second, I started gardening, and still do, watering my plants, talking care of my orange tree, cleaning the space up and more. I have been gardening for almost one year now. Then, I have also been practicing some music; I've been singing, playing the bass and even learning some violin.

Besides my hobbies, I've also gotten used to my family members, now I have some deep talks with my mother, I've gotten sick of my sister less often and have been eating healthier. Every time I go to the store or market I forget my mask and go all the way once more to do the errands.

We've all been waking up 10 minutes before our first class, and going back to bed in the break time of each class. We've been spending a lot of time sitting down with teachers who get mad at us if we move or aren't focused on the webcam. I bet some of us have been struggling with problems and now wear glasses... not to mention anxiety. Whatever, we're coming back to school soon, hopefully because I've been getting sick of distance.
