Anna: I think I'll go to that concert tonight. It'll be fun. Do you want to come?

Maddy: If we have a lot of homework, we won't have time.

Anna: I'll do my homework after school. I don't have a lot. It won't take four hours!

Maddy: Well, if my dad says it's alright, I'll come. Who's playing?

Anna: Some friends of Ben's. He says if we go, we'll enjoy it.

Maddy: OK. I'll ask my dad. If I do my homework early, it won't be a problem.

Anna: Awesome! Oh, one more thing. If it's expensive, will you lend me some money?

Life outside Earth

Have you ever wondered how the future will be? Most people say we will live outside Earth, and that sounds really cool. Nikita Vovolka is a Russian student of aerospace engineering; this is how he thinks life will be outside Earth.

"I think it will be very hard at the beginning, specially because the first colonizers won't have all the comforts they had on Earth. As you know, other planets don't have same composition as Earth, so people won't have a land to produce their own food or places to get fresh water. I believe they will develop systems that will help them with these situations, but it will definitely take a lot of time.

Another thing to take in count is the cost of living. During the first years, it will be extremely expensive to travel and live in the space; but with the time, these things won't be so expensive because they will be more common and more companies will offer them."

How about you? How do you think life will be outside Earth?

1. Most people say we won't live outside Earth.
2. Nikita Vovolka's major is aerospace engineering.
3. Nikita thinks life in space will be easy.
4. Earth has a different composition which is good for getting water.
5. Other planets will be suitable for living.
6. The first colonizers will work as engineers.
