s never designed an app.

Dear Leah,

I'm having a great time here in Indiana. It's a camp where you can do lots of outdoor activities. We've ridden horses and slept under the stars. Yesterday we went zip lining, which was amazing. You should give it a try!

The people are really nice too. I'm sharing a room with three guys from Boston who are really fun.

We're staying in a youth hostel which is in the mountains. It's near a lake where you can swim and canoe. It's so beautiful – you should come with me next year.

OK, well that's all my news for now. I hope you're having a good summer – see you on the 21st.

Alex

PS I almost forgot: I met a boy who knows you – Danny Zhao – he said to say Hi.

An e-postcard

1 Work in pairs. Look at the postcards and discuss the similarities and differences.

Similarities: layout of the card with text on the left and the address on the right. In both cases there is a stamp and a post mark (but these are not real in the e-postcard). The address is written line by line occupying the middle to lower part of the right hand side. There is a separation line between the two sides.

Differences: one is handwritten on card, one is typed on a screen. The onscreen writer can choose font and letter size and correct mistakes. We can also see the different stages in the process of making the e-postcard (select style, select photo etc.)

3 Read the message again. What information does Ale

4 Read again and answer the questions.

- 1 How do you say 'Hello' in a letter or postcard? Dear X,
- 2 What's the first thing you often write about? where you are

- 3 What type of information is in each paragraph?

Paragraph 1 – the camp and activities, Paragraph 2 – people, Paragraph 3 – the place, Paragraph 4 – finishing the message closing greeting ('see you on the 21st) and Name

- 4 How do you finish a postcard?

- 5 What is a 'PS'? 'Post Scriptum' (Latin – meaning 'after letter'). It includes extra information you forgot to include in the main part of the letter.

5 Find more examples of sentences with who, where and which. Then complete the rules.

- 1 Use who to connect people.
- 2 Use where to connect places.
- 3 Use which to connect things.

- It's a campe where y
