It's surprising when your friends don't like the same bands as you, 1 isn't it ? Of course, we can all listen to different music now, 2 can't we ? People don't have time to listen to all of the radio stations, music streaming services, and so on, 3 do they ? And the bands aren't always good, 4 are they ? In the past, there were only a few famous bands, and everyone listened to them, 5 didn't they ? But we live in more exciting times now, 6 don't we ?

Latitude Festival

1

Latitude Festival has been going since 2006. It takes place every year over four days in July (Thursday to Sunday) at Henham Park in the UK. It's an incredible mix of music and other arts. Weekend tickets for over-16s cost around £200, including camping. There are also cheaper weekend teen tickets for 13-15 year-olds and day tickets. Make sure you buy your ticket early, as they sell out fast.

This year, there were seven different music stages to choose from, with a huge variety of bands and music styles, from rap to folk, pop to electronic. In addition, there was theater, film, literature and comedy. The sound quality was excellent at all the stages and there were some great special effects. If you enjoy watching new music talent, don't miss the Sunrise Arena. I saw some brilliant performances there, including Temples and Sigrid. Teenagers should definitely check out the Teen Area – for me, it was the best thing about the festival. I did two amazing workshops there. I've learned a lot!

There isn't much I'd change about the festival: it's well-organized and well-planned. However, I think there should be more showers as they got crowded. In general, the food was fantastic, but small bottles of water cost £2.50, which is too expensive.

It's well worth going to Latitude. There's something for everyone and the tickets are good value. I'd recommend this festival, especially to teenagers who love music and trying new things.
