Students in Australia attend school for approximately 180 days per year. The school year, divided into a four terms, runs from late b January to mid c December

The terms are separated by two-weeks holiday, except the summer vacation, which is from mid December to late January.

The typical school day in Australia starts at d 9am and finishes at e 3:30pm. There is a short break in the morning and students have lunch at school. Some schools, however, offer an afternoon break. For those parents who need to leave home for work earlier, morning, after-school and holiday care are available.

In addition to math, English, arts and f science, students learn about sustainability and the environment. They also have music, dance and h swimming classes. Most schools offer other languages, such as Indonesian, Mandarin and i Japanese.

Students have to wear a j uniform and, because the climate in Australia is very harsh, many schools adopt the rule 'no hat, no play,' which means a student can only play outside if he or she wears a k hat.
