GRAMMAR 2

Second Conditional

- 1 Look at the following sentences. Circle the clause which indicates a condition and underline the one which indicates the consequence in case that condition becomes a fact.
- a If I had an argument with a friend, I would apologize.
- b If a friend told me a lie, I would be very upset.
- c If I didn't like my friend's sister, I would avoid talking to her.

- 2 Complete the chart with the clauses. Then, choose the correct information as to the rules of the second conditional.

if clause	consequence
If I had an argument with a friend,	I would apologize.
If a friend told me a lie,	I would be very upset.
If I didn't like my friend's sister,	I would avoid talking to her.

- a The second conditional is used to express a particular condition in the future.
- ☒ There is NOT a real likelihood for this condition to happen.
- ☐ There is a real likelihood for this condition to happen.
- b The structure of the second conditional is:
- ☐ if + simple present (condition) – will + verb base form (consequence) /
- ☒ if + simple past (condition) – would + verb base form (consequence).

3 Choose the correct words.

- a What would / did you say if your best friend were / would be late to meet you?
- b Robert would go / went to the movies with Mike if he wouldn't / didn't play soccer all the time.
- c If he told / would tell me a lie, I wouldn't be / wasn't happy.
- d Would you tell / Did you tell the truth if you didn't / wouldn't like a friend's sister?

4 Complete the sentences using the second conditional.

- a I'm going to Paris this summer, but if I _ went _ (go) to London, I _ would visit _ (visit) my English friend.
