Modern–Day Mysteries

Blue dogs and giant plastic figures.
Unbelievable or fascinating? It seems everyone loves a good mystery and solving them is fun - but do all mysteries have a solution?

Mystery blue dogs

It's not every day you see bright blue dogs. When they started appearing in Mumbai in India, locals found it puzzling, then worrying. A journalist posted photos on social media and the story quickly went viral. Soon, people from all over the world wanted to know what had happened. Could someone have painted them? Was it a joke? Were they a new species? It turned out that all the dogs were 'street dogs' without owners. At first, people thought that the dogs could have been in a polluted river and this somehow turned them blue. However, nobody had ever seen dogs there. Then locals noticed dogs on the land outside a dye factory a few kilometers away from the river. The dogs had managed to get inside the fences. There were puddles of blue dye all around. It was very hot and the dogs must have rolled in the water to cool off, leaving their fur blue. Luckily, the color wasn't permanent and the dogs were fine!

Giant man found on beach

Finding a plastic figure on a beach might not sound particularly curious, but when it's 1.8 meters high, it is! When people first saw the photos, they thought they weren't real – but the figure, which looks like a giant Lego® man, is real. It was found on a beach in Japan, and similar figures have appeared on beaches around the world, including the Netherlands and the UK. It can't be a dramatic advertising stunt, as some people thought, because Lego said they didn't create the figures. So, who is making them and why? One theory is that they might be the work of a Dutch artist who calls himself 'Ego Leonard'. He might have made the figures to protest about the amount of plastic in our oceans. Leonard hasn't confirmed if this is true. All the figures have the curious slogan 'No Real Than You Are' on them. What does it mean? Did Leonard make the figures? Why? Nobody is sure – perhaps you will solve the mystery!

 20 Read and listen to the text. Are the sentences true or false? Correct the false sentences.
